

HAPPY
LUNAR
NEW YEAR

The Lunar New Year has always been a time of great festivity and hope. And after the muted affairs in recent years, I trust that some proper celebrations are in order with reunion gatherings and fireworks – with the proper SOPs in place, of course. And as we partake in the overdue festivities, let us remember the ties that bind – the honour we give to our elders, the love we have for our family and the abiding friendships we cherish.

May the festive season also remind us of our shared purpose at UCSI Group. All of us have different perspectives, cultures and backgrounds. But in ways large and small, we come together, day after day, united by our shared mission to shape the future together with our stakeholders. Diversity is our great strength. It is woven into the fabric of UCSI's DNA and this uniqueness – our melting pot – continuously keeps us fresh and dynamic.

At the same time, may we be alive to each other's struggles. For while the new year may bring much joy and optimism, there are some who have been dealt a bad hand. The unprecedented floods that wreaked havoc in the Klang Valley stand out as a case in point. I'm encouraged to see the UCSI community reaching out through various flood relief efforts. Let us continue in the same spirit and share our Lunar New Year blessings with those in need.

To everyone celebrating the Lunar New Year and to those who have holiday plans, I wish you and your families peace, prosperity, good health and joy. Stay safe as you travel, observe public health guidelines and use the festive break to recharge yourselves. May we come back stronger to make the most of what 2022 will bring our way.

新年快乐。身体健康。愿你幸福。
